Created over a period of 17 years, the idea for the book started back in 2001 when we moved from London to the Scottish Highlands. Having always loved nature and landscape and now living in such a stunning location, we soon began photographing the splendid wealth of imagery that wa son our door step. From the beginning our approach to the photography was different. Our aim was to turn the images into fabulous stories developing the magical and fantasy elements of this wonderful environment.

Big Fence / Pitcairn Island, Rhiannon Adam  New for 2022

In 2015, Rhiannon Adam, inspired by a childhood gift of The Mutiny on The Bounty and a desire to capture the island's fragility on expiring analogue film, made the long journey to Pitcairn Island. Due to the quarterly shipping schedule, she remained trapped on the island for 96 nights. Naturally suspicious of 'journalists', Pitcairners were, on the whole, reluctant to be involved in Adam's project. Throughout the book, subjects mostly appear alone, photographed in solitude and away from prying eyes.

Designed to be as impenetrable and complex as the island itself, the book is comprised of two parts: Adam's own experience of the island as related through her captions and personal stories, and a volume of photographs and related archive. The latter charts the development of the particular characteristics that led to community breakdown, from both a contemporary and historical perspective. Throughout, Adam encourages us to consider the dangers of romanticism and to reflect on our collective culpability for female subjugation.

Big Fence / Pitcairn Island is a powerful and unsettling exploration of a claustrophobic 'Paradise Lost': a broken society shrouded in mistrust.

Rhiannon Adam is a photographic artist. She was born in Co. Cork, Ireland, and attended Central Saint Martins college of Art and Design and the University of Cambridge, where she studied Arts, Design and Environment, and English literature respectively. She is currently based between London and the United States.

Looking Out From Within, Julia Fullerton-Batten

Covid-19 came. Life changed around the world. For ever. Award-winning fine-art photographer Julia Fullerton-Batten felt she couldn't sit around helpless. During her evening permitted exercise, walking around her local neighbourhood, she noticed people looking out of their windows onto a newly desolate world.

This was sufficient for her to formulate how she would visually portray the disturbing effect of the Covid-19 lockdown had on people's everyday lives, not only of those in her West London neighbourhood but of millions around the world. Little did she know that she would still be shooting her project over a year later. Limited Edition of 1000.

Julia Fullerton-Batten, Julia Fullerton-Batten is a worldwide acclaimed and exhibited fine-art photographer. Her body of work now encompasses twelve major projects spanning a decade of engagement in the field.

Jenny Lewis moved to Hackney over twenty years ago via a spell at Preston University where she acquired a Fine Art degree and a husband. Since then she has made her living as an editorial photographer but continues to pursue a range of personal work. Much of this centres on her experience of living and working in East London.
Hackney Studios, Jenny Lewis

Hackney, East London, is well known for its vibrant creative community. Jenny Lewis spent four years in and out of studios across the borough photographing a tribe of artists who over time have defined the area. Painters, illustrators, filmmakers, jewellers, ceramicists and fashion designers invite us into their studios and share their private thoughts about the creative process.

What began with a chance encounter with fashion designer Isobel Webster grew organically into a ‘family tree' of the borough's creative community, with each artist nominating the next person to be photographed. Lewis notes that many of the artists featured in the project have since been forced to leave their studios due to recent steep rent increases, and as such, hopes this book will stand as a timely reminder and celebration of the spirit of creativity in one of London's most dynamic areas.

Being Inbetween - Carolyn Mendelsohn

Being Inbetween is a series of 90 photographic portraits of girls aged between ten and twelve, exploring the complex transition between childhood and young adulthood. Mendelsohn's own experiences are the starting point to the series – It is an exploration, a way of giving a voice to the girls who are at this special time in their lives; a way to explore the hidden complexity, duality and contradictions that mark it. Girls between ten and twelve are often marketed to as ‘tweens' and seen as a group. They become invisible as individuals. Carolyn heard some parents describing the age group as “ungainly”, “awkward” and “growing into their faces”. They are at a vulnerable stage and often hidden within the cocoon of familial protection until they emerge as young women. It is a complicated and fascinating time; whilst you are being shaped in your soon to be adult form, your opinions and beliefs, hopes and fears, are emerging.

There is a beauty to this age, one that is sometimes concealed in attitude, embarrassment and self-consciousness. The girls are collaborators in the portrait process; invited to wear clothing of their choice, and after the portrait was taken, interviewed with the same set of questions, and recorded the answers. These are the Inbetween girls; amazing, fearless, fearful, brave, funny, and smart individuals, getting ready to take on the world. Featuring a forward by Zelda Cheatle & an essay by Anne McNeill

John Galliano for Dior - Robert Fairer

John Galliano's creations for the house of Dior have entered fashion history and are widely recognised as some of the most breathtaking and imaginative collections ever created. John Galliano for Dior is the first publication entirely dedicated to showcasing these unforgettable designs, which have become collectors' items and form a key chapter of the history of the house of Dior - 'the greatest house in the world', as Galliano stated when he was first placed at its helm. The book unfolds chronologically, revisiting the most iconic creations and revealing previously unseen behind-the-scenes moments that capture models, hairdressers, stylists, make-up artists and John Galliano himself at their most creative. Robert Fairer's stunning and high-energy photographs convey the drama, glamour and wild imagination that defined Galliano's Dior shows.

*British photographer Robert Fairer worked exclusively for American Vogue behind the scenes for over a decade. Beginning his career at British Elle in the mid 1990s, then Harpers Bazaar USA and finally at American Vogue, he covered the fashion zeitgeist of supermodel, designer and fashion excess from 1993-2011. His backstage archive has been published in four monographs, "Alexander McQueen Unseen", "John Galliano Unseen", "Marc Jacobs Unseen" and "John Galliano for Dior" by Thames & Hudson, Yale University Press, Schirmer Mosel and Abrams. Robert's work is published in The New York Times, Vogue, Harpers Bazaar, I-D Magazine, and Visionaire, as well as fashion, portrait and lifestyle books, and anthologies. John Galliano: Unseen, Robert Fairer.

Now creative director of Maison Margiela, John Galliano started his career in London in the late 1980s, straight after graduating from Central Saint Martins. After being appointed head designer of Christian Dior in 1996, Galliano continued to create two collections a year for his namesake brand. They acted in many ways as a laboratory of ideas, allowing him to let his imagination run wild, free from both the commercial pressures associated with a house as iconic and as global as Dior and the influence of the hallowed house's iconic pieces – a pure expression of his personal design style. Opening with an essay on the designer’s work, John Galliano: Unseen unfolds chronologically. Thirty collections are included, each introduced by a short text by Claire Wilcox, revisiting the designer’s most iconic creations and revealing previously unseen behind-the-scenes moments that capture models, hairdressers, stylists, makeup artists and John Galliano himself at their most creative. Robert Fairer’s stunning and high-energy photographs capture the glamour and frenzy that defined Galliano’s shows.

Circle of Confusion, Aidan McCarthy

On Sunday May 6th I walked the length of Manhattan, New York, to Ground Zero. It was a very clear day and the light was good. Condensed. The first thing I noticed on arriving was the silence. There were many people moving among the floral, written and pictorial tributes aggregated around the perimeter of the site. But they were moving soundlessly. There was no work being undertaken on the site so the air was particularly still. I went up to the viewing platform that overlooked the area where the towers had been. Nearly all of the rubble and debris had been removed. The space was vast and empty. I was unable to make a photograph.

In a globalised 24 hour media culture, everybody had seen the imagery. And any photograph that I might make would be meaningless in the face of what had happened here. Despite the profundity of the scene, I had no impulse to record on film what was in front of me.

I am a London based photographer & film maker with a background in the fashion industry, working with both avant-garde designers and editorial clients. Recently I have developed a series of new, conceptual portfolios in which I explore the space where moods of mystery, beauty and the metaphysical overlap with so-called documentary practice. This is the fugitive that I am trying to trap. More recently I have become interested in prosecuting the social & politicised issues of the day such as identity and civil liberties. Restriction in all its forms is a recurring theme for me. I believe that photographs should always be invitations to speculation and deduction.

An Equal Difference, Gabrielle Motola

An Equal Difference takes a closer look at life and modern thought in contemporary Iceland. It does so from the perspective that who you are is more important than what you are. It takes inspiration from a country that has ranked first for gender equality for the past several consecutive years. That said statistics do not come close to telling the entire story. This book offers something beyond academic analysis. It beckons us to gain insight into ourselves and thus into the fabric of society and the larger world which we are part of, not apart from.
